

Britain Ponders: Tobacco or Not Tobacco

Since last March, when the Royal College of Physicians roundly condemned cigarettes as injurious, the British Government has been conducting a campaign to discourage smoking, especially among the young. The effects on cigarette consumption thus far may be said to be mixed, but the effects on British cartooning have been marked, as these several examples show.

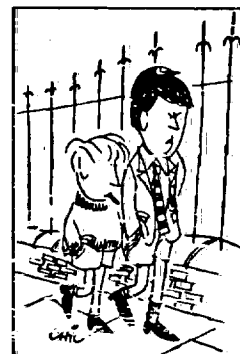

From The Daily Mail
"I tell you, giving up smoking is not making me miserable, unbearable, nervy, jumpy...!"

From The Spectator
"So that's agreed then, we'll drop the sex angle and play up the death wish."

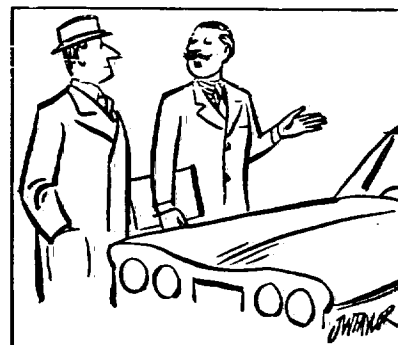

© P. Smith
"I can't afford both so I've decided on cartoon."

© P. Smith
"I bet you'll give it up when you can read."

© P. Smith
"You never complained about my cooking before you gave up smoking."

© P. Smith
"And of course the latest safety devices such as seat-belts and no cigarette lighter."

THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE

1005150637